

1. Brand character

Current consumer-food identity

Warm. Practical. Credible.

- BrightBite helps busy households choose a warm breakfast without turning everyday food into a medical or performance product.
- Food should look real and appetizing. Product information should be compact, factual and easy to scan.
- Avoid clinical authority cues, extreme transformation language and crowded promotional templates.

Current palette

Cinnamon brown

Breakfast amber

Warm cream

Charcoal

2. Logo use

Select the production logo from the asset register

Preferred lockup

- Use a horizontal BrightBite signature for short, wide paid-media surfaces.
- The approved mark combines a sunrise-and-bowl icon with the BrightBite wordmark and a small KITCHEN descriptor.
- Keep the logo clear of pack edges, food photography and CTA buttons.
- Do not redraw the mark from this guide. Use the approved production file in `asset_library/`.

Structure illustration only - use the registered asset file.

3. Product and food imagery

Packshot first, food cue second

Required visual hierarchy

- The current Cinnamon Starter cup is the primary object and must remain recognizable at banner size.
- The supporting oatmeal photograph provides warmth and appetite appeal; it must not replace or hide the packaging.
- Show steam or another warm-breakfast cue without making it look artificial.
- The compact nutrition-facts panel may support the claim but should not become the hero.

4. Typography and banner layout

Mobile in-app banner

Content zones

Use the active paid-media record for exact canvas and safe margins.

- Keep the headline to two lines or fewer.
- Use no more than six short copy groups.
- CTA belongs on the right side inside the safe margin.
- Keep the source line readable and away from the crop edge.

5. Nutrition claims

Factual, specific and proportionate

Allowed claim types

- Preparation time: a specific factual time such as ready in 90 seconds.
- Protein: a factual quantity with its serving unit, such as grams per cup.
- Taste and flavor: cinnamon, warm breakfast and starter-pack language.
- Label reference: direct viewers to nutrition facts on pack.

Do not use

- weight-loss promises
- doctor endorsements
- guaranteed all-day energy
- disease-treatment language
- medical-grade framing
- extreme discount claims

6. Production checklist

Resolve from the working files

Before exporting

- Confirm the launch date, market and exact placement in the task and campaign brief.
- Select one Approved placement record whose effective window includes the launch date.
- For each required asset role, confirm approval state, dates, campaign, placement and market.
- Use the visible copy exactly enough to preserve product name, time, protein amount, CTA and source-line meaning.
- Check that excluded medical, weight-loss, discount and previous-version directions are absent.
- Export one final image only; do not place internal asset IDs or approval labels on the artwork.