Brand positioning

FlowForge helps small product teams plan work without noise. Launch visuals should feel calm, practical, and product-led. The brand should promise focus and clarity, not automation spectacle.

Color system

The active launch palette uses deep green, warm cream, amber focus, and soft sage. The palette should feel composed and useful. Purple gradient launch treatments belong to an older template and should not become the active background system.

Icon use

Use the folded-path app icon or compact wordmark as a small product signature. The launch system favors a top-right safe-area placement with enough breathing room.

Interface imagery

Hero imagery should show a calm weekly planning board: columns, task cards, focus states, and a sense of one clear sprint plan. Avoid generic phone photography, lightning-bolt automation imagery, or a dense wall of dashboards.

Typography

Use clean geometric or UI sans-serif typography. The headline should feel confident but measured. Avoid script, distressed, or overly condensed shout-style display type.

Layout tendencies

The launch system favors product copy on the left or upper area, a planning-board interface through the center or right, a top-right icon, and a grounded lower call to action.

Production notes

Keep UI details legible but simplified. Avoid decorative complexity that competes with campaign messaging. Required campaign copy is supplied separately in `campaign_brief.md`. This guide defines product-launch identity, visual tone, and production guardrails.

Images or visual references, when used in campaign work, are illustrative references for tone and subject matter only, not mandatory final-layout templates.
