Brand positioning

QuietDock makes compact workspace charging feel calm and intentional. Launch visuals should make the product feel useful, tidy, and quietly technical rather than loud, urgent, or novelty-driven.

Color system

The active product-launch palette uses navy (#1C2541), cool white (#F5F7FA), aqua (#5BC0BE), and pale blue-gray (#D7E4EA). The palette should feel clean and organized. Red warning themes belong to older problem-solution tests and should not become the active color system.

Mark use

Use the current QuietDock QD mark or compact wordmark as a small product signature. The preferred placement is the upper-left safe area with enough breathing room. Do not replace it with the retired lightning badge.

Product imagery

Hero imagery should center on a compact desk dock, phone, earbuds, and tidy desk essentials. Surfaces can be softly lit and minimal. Avoid messy cable piles, chaotic before-after scenes, and cartoon technology characters.

Typography

Use clean modern sans-serif typography with generous spacing. The headline should feel composed and useful. Avoid warning-label type, novelty lettering, and thin low-contrast scripts.

Layout tendencies

The system favors a clear product/headline region, a central tidy dock hero, an upper-left mark, and a lower callout strip for supporting information and action. The result should read as a finished launch image, not a rule table.

Production notes

Keep campaign copy readable at social size and preserve safe margins around the mark and action area. Required campaign copy is supplied separately in `campaign_brief.md`. This guide defines the product identity, visual tone, and production guardrails.

Images or visual references, when used in campaign work, are illustrative references for tone and subject matter only, not mandatory final-layout templates.
